Space traveler June 20 luncheon speaker

Astronaut Lovell to dedicate park

by JILL BETTNER

Former space traveler James Lovell, one of the first men to orbit the moon, will come to Elk Grove Village Friday, June 20, to speak to local businessmen and dedicate Lindbergh Park where an Apollo command module will be displayed.

The ex-astronaut, now national advertising spokesman for Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., Newark N.J., will speak at an Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce luncheon at noon at the Navarone Steak House, 1905 E. Higgins Rd.

After the luncheon, Lovell will preside over dedication ceremonies at 2 p.m. at Lindbergh Park near Adolph Link School on West Glenn Trail Road. Streets in the neighborhood around the park are named after a number of former astronauts, including Lovell.

Park officials have for 10 months been attempting to persuade an astronaut to attend the dedication ceremonies.

Invitations were extended to John Glenn and Frank Borman as well as to Lovell.

Parks Supt. Jack Claes said because of the space theme of the park and its unique focal point, the 12,000-pound, 12-foot space capsule, the park district was anxious to have an astronaut participate in the dedication.

"We're especially pleased to have such a distinguished space traveler as Jim Lovell come to help us dedicate the park," Claes said.

Lovell, who participated in both the Gemini and Apollo space programs, is probably best known as commander of the ill-fated Apollo 13 moonshot.

In April of 1970, an explosion of one of the spacecraft's oxygen tanks seriously damaged the venicle, creating the space program's first in-flight emergency in 22 manned missions.

The capsule that will soon be installed on a special "landing pad" at Lindbergh Park was one of the first made in he Apollo program. Dubbed "002," the capsule was used in testing landing capabilities of that type of spacecraft.

The capsule, which children will be able to climb on and explore, was acquired by the park district last September with the help of Sen. Charles Percy R-Ill. and officials of the Air and Space Museum in the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. It is one of only four spacecraft released for public use by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the only vehicle available in a public park.

Stop music! Church speakers stolen

by STEVE BROWN

It appears the heavenly harmonies emanating from the Elk Grove Baptist Church, 801 Bisner, finally proved too much for someone this week.

Village police reported that someone stopped the religious music by ripping five large speakers off the roof of the church.

The music was involved in a controversy in March when neighbors complained to the Elk Grove Village board that the music was disturbing them.

Police said neighbors reported seeing a man on the roof about 8 p.m.

The Rev. Schuyler Butler of the Church refused comment. "I will have absolutely no comment, nothing at all to say," Rev. Butler said Friday.

He told police the five speakers were valued at about $750.

Some neighbors who thought the religious tunes were not divine were less than dejected about the loss.

"I think it is wonderful. It has never been so quiet around here," one woman said.

All the neighbors asked their names not be used, but one asked, "Why should the church be allowed to break the law?"

VILLAGE OFFICIALS reviewed the residents' complaints after the protest in March. The village concluded the music did not violate village noise ordinances.

During village board discussion, Village Atty. Edward Hofert suggested, "What is a nuisance to one may be an exhilaration to another." He also indicated there was nothing the village could do.

One neighbor said that after the meeting with the village board the chimes were toned down somewhat, but the volume has been increasing gradually in recent weeks.

Coping...

...with stairs, elevators and curbs is tough enough, but doubly so when you're handicapped

by DIANE MERMIGAS

High curbs, narrow doorways, stairs and control buttons placed too high on elevator walls are barriers that keep Rick Thorpe of Arlington Heights from getting where he wants to go.

"The life of a person confined to a wheelchair is like the story of the child who lives on the fifth floor of an apartment building but can only reach the third-floor button in the elevator," he said.

Thorpe, 20, has been confined to the use of a wheelchair and crutches since birth because of cerebral palsy.

SHORT TRAFFIC signals, tables spaced too closely in restaurants and narrow doorways are other problems that persons in wheelchairs encounter every day," Thorpe said.

"It's difficult to make a town, a nation, or a society stepless just to accommodate certain of us who must get around on crutches or in a wheelchair," Thorpe said.

"But if people start to realize which buildings are the most heavily used and try to make those facilities more accessible to disabled persons, it would be a start in the right direction," he said.

RICK THORPE, 2505 E. Mayfair Rd., Arlington Heights, finds it easier to "get around" in the suburbs because of slanting curbs and modern buildings that have ramps and elevators. "But the whole world is not brand new, and there are a lot of architectural barriers that keep handicapped people from moving about on their own as much as they would like to," he says.

Suit to give handicapped equal transportation facilities could be thorn in side of CTA, RTA

by United Press International

A quadriplegic and a senior citizen suffering from emphysema filed a suit in U.S. District Court in Chicago Friday that could shut down the Chicago Transit Authority and the Regional Transportation Authority.

The suit, filed in behalf of all disabled citizens, seeks an injunction against the RTA and CTA to prohibit the collection or disbursement of public funds — federal, state and local — until equal public-transportation facilities are provided for the handicapped.

The suit also seeks a court order to force the CTA and RTA to comply with provisions of the federal Urban Mass Transportation Act, which states that the elderly and handicapped have the same rights to transportation as other citizens and calls for "special efforts" to be made to ensure the availability of mass transportation to such persons.

THE SUIT WAS filed by two DePaul University law students — George Wolfe, a quadriplegic, and Janet Wolfe, who is in her 60s and suffers from emphysema.

The suit charges that mobility is required for persons to exercise their constitutional rights, including the rights to free association, free speech, redress of grievances and equal employment.

"The basis is that if you haven't got transportation, you can't get to work, you can't go to court to seek redress of grievances, you can't do much of anything," said Jeanne Sullivan, a member of the executive committee of the Chicago chapter of the National Assn. of Social Workers, which is supporting the suit.

"THIS IS A major action, possibly a landmark action, since Chicago is the largest city in which such action has been taken and the action is broader than previous suits," she said.

"The main thing is that Chicago has been worse than most cities in its disregard for its handicapped citizens."

The suit was filed with the cooperation and support of the National Center for Law and the Handicapped, Notre Dame University and the Chicago Advocates for the Handicapped.

Kill remap plan, Walker warns Daley

BLASTING remap plans, U.S. Rep. Abner Mikva, D-10th, left, said his district is so badly gerrymandered he's not sure "if my bedroom or my living room is in the district." Gov. Daniel Walker, right, said Mikva probably would lose his seat in Congress under proposed redistricting.

by BOB LAHEY

Stopping just short of a threat to veto it, Gov. Daniel Walker Friday called on Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley to abandon plans for congressional redistricting of the state.

Walker appeared at a Chicago press conference with U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, whose district would be drastically reshaped under a map passed by Daley Democrats in the Illinois State recently.

"This is the second reapportionment bill proposed by the Daley Democrats to force Ab and others from office," Walker said. "I oppose both measures."

AIDES TO Mikva took the governor's statement as a clear indication that he would veto the redistricting plan if it is passed by the House. Walker has consistantly declined to reveal his veto plans until a measure reaches his desk.

Mikva told reporters he was grateful for "the strong degree of support expressed by the governor."

"I think this is the strongest statement he could make in view of his policy not to comment on vetoes ahead of time," Mikva said.

Walker said the map, which would

Area man charged in Florida murder

A Wheeling man, arrested by Schaumburg police for burglary recently, was charged Friday with murdering a woman with a screwdriver and hammer in Florida last year. Schaumburg police were holding Ralph R. Magna, 23, of 830 Corey Ln., in connection with a burglary Wednesday night at the Midas Muffler Shop, 506 E. Golf Rd. But it was during questioning by Det. William Ostermann that Magna confessed killing the 22-year-old woman June 30, 1974 in Dania, Fla., Police Chief Martin Conroy said.

Schaumburg-less map

If you want to find Schaumburg, the new home of the regional office of the Illinois Dept. of Transportation, don't look at the department of transportation's new state highway map. But being unmapped is something the sprawling, fast-growing village has been used to — even with the Woodfield Shopping Center, the world's largest indoor shopping mall, within its boundaries. On the statewide 1975 map, Schaumburg is missing, while the names of neighboring, smaller communities — Hoffman Estates, Roselle, Elk Grove Village, Rolling Meadows, Palatine and Streamwood are on the map.

No biogas plant for area

The controversial site in northern Rolling Meadows for an experimental biogas treatment plant was turned down by the federal government Friday. The city had committed the site southwest of Rohlwing Road and Northwest Highway and had been in the running for selection as the location for the facility. The only way the facility now can be built is with private industrial financing. Palatine residents living near the site had objected to the project.

Just 16 GOP senators say they back Ford

Only 16 out of 38 Senate Republicans have signed a survey declaring their support for President Ford's planned bid for the 1976 GOP nomination, it was learned Friday. The poll, or pledge of support, was being circulated by Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, chairman of the GOP Senatorial Campaign Committee, and Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott.

Ford draws bipartisan backing on NATO

President Ford gave Democratic and Republican congressional leaders a personal report on his European trip Friday and drew strong bipartisan support for his attempt to repair rifts in the NATO alliance and to advance peace in the Middle East. The Senate's No. 2 Democrat, Robert Byrd of West Virginia, hinted that Sec. of State Henry A. Kissinger might go back to the Middle East to try to mediate a settlement after Ford confers here next week with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, but Kissinger said the prediction was "premature."

Pentagon involved in bribery scheme

A businessman who allegedly paid $450,000 to Saudi Arabian generals on behalf of the Northrop Corp. discussed "improper payoffs" with Pentagon officials in 1973, according to a previously secret report released Friday. Northrop documents showed that Adnan Khashoggi and two Northrop officials met Aug. 9, 1973, with the group including William Robinson, a former Air Force international relations adviser, Air Force Brig. Gen. Robert Trimble and Capt. Dale Oliver.

Belgium to decide on F16 jet today

The "arms deal of the century" is expected to be clinched today when the Belgian government makes a decision on a replacement for its air force's aging F104 Starfighter fleet. Holland, Norway and Denmark, the other three countries involved, already have announced their intention to buy the American F16 over a French plane.

New South Viet government takes over

South Vietnam's new government took office Friday, marking the official takeover of power and the anniversary of formation of the Provisional Revolutionary Government in the South Vietnamese jungles exactly six years ago. Delegates from 10 nations and the Palestinian Liberation Organization met government officials at the former presidential palace in downtown Saigon. In Thailand, the United States Friday began the withdrawal of its B52 bomber force, ending nearly a decade of pounding Communist targets in Vietnam and Cambodia. And in Laos, Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma said he has approved the deployment of Communist Pathet Lao troops throughout the nation, including areas and cities once controled by rightists, to speed up "integration" of former warring factions. American officials, meantime, bowed to increased money demands from Laotian employes of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

Ford receives panel's CIA report, moves to stop publication of data

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Rockefeller commission turned over to President Ford Friday secret data on CIA involvement in foreign assassination plots and a final report on its investigation of charges the CIA spied on Americans.

The White House blocked the commission's plans to publish Sunday the report on domestic-intelligence activities, and said a decision on making it public will be made after Ford has read it.

The data on murder plots will stay secret, but will be given to Senate CIA investigators, Press Sec. Ron Nessen told reporters.

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, chairman of the Senate investigation, earlier charged that the commission was attempting to give light treatment to the assassination question.

Nessen repeatedly denied any strategy to "cover up" the findings of the commission, and said the delay is unrelated to an 11th-hour decision by the commission to withhold the evidence related to assassinations.

Ford accepted the 350-page document from Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and said he hopes when it is implemented it will assure that "there is no question in the future that the CIA will live within the law."

When Ford received the CIA report from Rockefeller, he told the vice president "it's going to be a long weekend of reading and I'm looking forward not only to reading the document but to studying your recommendations."

Later, White House officials said Ford planned to play golf Sunday — indicating he would have little time to read the CIA report this weekend.

After testifying at a closed meeting of the Church committee Friday, former CIA Director John A. McCone acknowledged there were U.S.-sanctioned plots against Fidel Castro in the early 1960s, but said they were "minor" and ultimately abandoned.

He told reporters the temper of the times should be considered in judging the events, and recalled that Castro had turned "the sacred soil of Cuba over to the Soviet Union for short-range missiles that could destroy every city east of the Mississippi."

Church, however, said secret evidence shows the assassination problem was "not confined" to Castro, and said: "I really think the subject cannot be simplified or dismissed in that manner."

2 arrested after hijack, prison break

JACKSON, Mich. (UPI) — A knife-wielding man hijacked a helicopter Friday, forced its pilot to land at a handkerchief-marked rendezvous inside the walls of America's largest walled prison and whisked away an inmate.

Police announced two arrests within hours but said the inmate still was at large.

The prisoner freed in the aerial invasion of Southern Michigan Prison within gunshot range of a guard tower was identified as Dale R. Remling, 46, of Sidney, Mich. He was serving a 7-to-10 year term for purchasing a car with a forged $2,400 check.

State police said they arrested Donald Hill, 23, of Howell, Mich., on kidnap charges and Jolyne Lou Conn, 31, of Webberville, Mich., on charges she aided the escape.

Authorities said Hill was arrested in Livingston County on parole charges and transferred to Jackson when police charged him in connection with the breakout at the prison.

Miss Conn, described as a girlfriend of Remling, was arrested after police stopped the car she was driving — described by authorities as a decoy in the carefully executed escape. State police said the car was one of two used in the escape.

The search for Remling in the Jackson area was suspended after a fruitless house-to-house search in the area where the hijacked helicopter was forced to land.

Officials said the escape was so well-planned that it had a precise 11:05 a.m. landing time and an exact landing spot. They said Remling used a red handkerchief to mark the touchdown spot near a plant where prisoners make automobile license plates.

The plot was borrowed south of the border. It was identical with one carried out in the late 1960s in Mexico City when a helicopter whisked away an American prisoner. It also followed closely the plot of a current Charles Bronson film called "Breakout."

The movie was shown to inmates at Southern Michigan Prison three days ago.

MICHIGAN STATE POLICE officials dust helicopter for fingerprints Friday after it was hijacked and forced to land inside Southern Michigan Prison, where Dale R. Remling, 46, entered and was whisked away.

Senate approves $30 million arms bill resoundingly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the wake of the Vietnam debacle, the Senate Friday defeated major efforts to cut back the U.S. military program and passed 77 to 6 a $30 billion arms procurement bill.

The massive authorization bill also carried credit authority for Israel to purchase U.S. arms through Dec. 31, 1977.

Sen. John C. Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and floor manager of the bill which sets defense-spending ceilings for the next 15 months, termed the action a "smashing victory for a strong defense."

Stennis said the defeat of nearly every amendment aimed at cutting defense spending carries "the message that the American people as a whole do not want to be caught short in the field of military preparedness. They also carry a message to the world that the Senate feels that this is no time to weaken our defense posture."

The only six senators voting against the measure were Dick Clark, D-Iowa; Mike Gravel, D-Alaska; Mark Hatfield, R-Ore.; George S. McGovern, D-S.D.; Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.; and Mike Mansfield, D-Mont.

Stennis said the action carried "a clear message to the President that there is strong, solid bipartisan support in the Senate in his efforts to obtain arms limitations and reductions on a mutual and balanced basis."

The only major liberal victory was a 43 to 41 rejection of testing programs for MARV, a missile warhead which can change course after it has taken off and is capable of destroying Russian missiles in their silos.

Supporters of the amendment said it would create a "counterforce" weapon.

The decision to extend the Israeli credit authority came on a 68 to 22 vote that overrode objections by Stennis that the measure properly belonged in the foreign aid bill under jurisdiction of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In other actions Friday:

• The Senate decided by voice vote that women should be eligible to attend the military service academies.

• Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., released a declassified report of the restrictive rules of engagement employed by the Johnson administration in Vietnam.

4 congressmen hurt in crash

HAMILTON, Ga. (UPI) — A bus carrying Army Sec. Howard "Bo" Callaway and at least four congressmen collided with a pulpwood truck in a driving rain Friday killing the drivers and injuring many of the passenters.

Hospital officials said Democratic Reps. John J. Flynt of Georgia and Walter Flowers, Robert Jones and Tom Bevill of Alabama were admitted for treatment. Flynt had fractured ribs, the hospital said. The nature of the injuries to the other congressmen was not described.

The dead were identified as Glenn Hartley, Union Springs, Ala., driver of the empty truck, and bus driver Roy McKinney.

HAROLD WILSON

Wilson calls Common Market victory 'historic'

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson won a landslide endorsement Friday for his bid to keep crisis-ridden Britain in the prosperous nine-nation European Common Market. He hailed the referendum victory as a "historic decision."

With vote counting almost complete in the first national referendum in British history, supporters racked up a margin of 68 per cent against 32 per cent — more than 2 to 1.

"It was an historic decision made by the British people in clear and unmistakable terms," Wilson said.

Wilson stressed it was "a free vote without constraint following a campaign conducted constructively and without rancor.

"It means that 14 years of national argument are over," he said. "It means that all those who had reservations about Britain's commitment should now join wholeheartedly without stint in the task of overcoming the economic problems that assail us as a nation and work wholeheartedly with our partners in Europe and our friends everywhere to meet the challenges confronting the whole world."

Home Sec. Roy Jenkins, chairman of the pro-Market referendum campaign, said: "This is a massive and heartening majority. For those of us who have worked to stay in the European Community it is not only a day of satisfaction but one of jubilation."

Neil Marten, chairman of the anti-Market campaign committee, said: "I think we have got to accept that this is the wish of the British people at this particular period of time."

Voters rejected warnings by the anti-Marketers that continued membership in the European Common Market would risk jobs, food and national independence.

Instead, the voters apparently accepted the argument of Market supporters that Britain's economic situation is so critical that her best hope of overcoming them is as a member of the world's largest economic group with a market of 250 million people rather than by trying to go it alone in an uncertain world.

The size of the "Yes" vote was particularly stunning because it involved not just parts of the country but virtually the entire United Kingdom.

Wales, most of Scotland and the industrial areas of the English Midlands and North all voted "Yes" by huge majorities.

buildings in larger cities like Chicago do, he said.

"People in wheelchairs tend to shy away from cities like Chicago because of the heavy traffic, the crowded sidewalks and the older buildings. We wouldn't even make it across the street much less down a narrow sidewalk filled with pedestrians," Thorpe said.

The world presents many architectural barriers for persons like Thorpe, "but none that are too high. None that can keep me from changing what I can't get over, to be able to go where I want," he said.

THORPE AND five other disabled students from the University of Illinois, Champaign-Urbana, who share a desire for "mobile independence" spent six months in France studying the architectural barriers prevalent in Europe.

They stayed in the University of Stockholm's Franco Scandanavian Institute in Aix-En-Provence to study the French language and culture.

They encountered century-old buildings with steep stairs and no elevators, the narrow sidewalks and the hills of the southern French town.

"We hardly saw anyone there in a wheelchair. It seems like Europeans are more conservative and keep disabled persons in one place. They don't give them a chance to move around and be a working part of the society like in America," Thorpe said.

"The French people just stared at us and told us in their native tongue how sorry they felt that we were in a wheelchair. Then they would ask if there was anything they could do," he said.

"But, we don't want pity and we don't even like to ask for assistance. It's a matter or pride," he said.

THORPE BELIEVES disabled persons "are obligated" to try and do almost everything on their own. So he has purchased a car equipped with hand controls that has enabled him to work his first summer job as a bookkeeper at Countryside Center for the Handicapped, Palatine.

He plans to continue his studies in business administration downstate and "educating the public on the importance of making allowances for the handicapped," he said.

"Because all we want is the chance to get around; just like everyone else."

Jury deliberates 10 hours

Bonk found innocent on all counts

by ANNE SLAVICEK

County Comr. Charles S. Bonk was found innocent on all counts of extortion and tax evasion late Friday.

The jury returned the not guilty verdict at 10:15 p.m. after about 10 hours of deliberations, Dist. Court Judge Hubert L. Will said.

Bonk was cleared of 17 counts stemming from alleged shakedowns of builders and developers for zoning changes in unincorporated suburban areas.

In closing arguments to the jury, Asst. U.S. Atty. Howard Hoffman said Bonk had participated in "a seven-year scheme" to obtain money through illegal use of his county commissioner's office.

"MR. BONK is guilty beyond any doubt whatsoever," Hoffman told the jury in the courtroom of U.S. District Court Judge Hubert L. Will.

"It's an indictment of a system, of an entire way of life in public government . . . it's a system that permits, allows, that invites the type of conduct Mr. Bonk has engaged in," Hoffman said.

Bonk and the key witnesses in the case, attorneys John M. Daley and Robert Haskins, were "political equals and allies," Hoffman charged.

"It's got to be somebody you can trust to deliver and to keep his mouth shut," he said of the men Bonk is charged with shaking down.

"IT'S A SYSTEM of government where you go along to get along," he said, urging the jury to "stop it, bring it to an end."

Defense attorney Thomas Foran charged the government's case was "built on sand, mud and slime."

In an emotional harangue, he called Haskins and Daley "scum, smart alecks, shysters, rotten thieves and corrupt bums."

Saying Bonk was "a patsy" for the two attorneys, Foran contended that the lawyers kept the cash they got from developers, not passing it on to Bonk as they had testified.

HE SAID THE government did not show what Bonk supposedly had done with the alleged bribe money.

"A hundred and forty-six thousand dollars in cash will put a pretty big lump in your mattress," Foran said.

The government had no deposit slips, safe deposit box entries or any proof that Bonk, "bought a big car, chased girls or gambled," Foran said.

Assistant U.S. Atty. Anton R. Valukas concluded the government's arguments.

"WE'RE NOT UP here to get somebody," he said, urging the jury not to decide the case on emotional issues.

"We believe it is important to take the Charles Bonks out of business . . . this is a sad case. You go back and do your duty and see that there are no more deals for Charlie Bonk," Valukas said.

County mailing assessment forms

County Assesor Thomas M. Tully has begun mailing more than 400,000 questionnaires to homeowners to update the county's assessment records.

Tully's office two years ago mailed similiar questionaires to more than 800,000 property owners as a part of a program to make computer-assisted assessments more accurate and uniform. The second questionnaire is going to homeowners who failed to return the firms the first time or who filled them out incorrectly.

Persons who don't respond to the second questionnaire will get an inspection of their property by county appraisers.

Abandon remap plan, Walker warns Daley

remove areas of his greatest strength from Mikva's district, would assure the defeat of the Evanston Democrat.

"If a public officeholder is to be retired," the governor said, "he should be retired by the people voting on election day — not by politicians scheming in a back room."

Walker added, "Mayor Daley should instruct his legislators to withdraw the map and concentrate on matters important to the people of this state."

MIKVA SAID the present map, drawn by a panel of judges in 1971 after the Illinois General Assembly failed to agree on a required redistricting plan in 1970, should be retained until the next census in 1980.

"I might have tried to participate in redistricting to get a more favorable district," he said. "But the present map is suitable to the needs of the people." Pointing out that many still consider the 10th District mostly Republican, he declared, "I'll take my chances in the district."

Pressure by Daley Democrats reportedly is intense for passage of the redistricting in the House, but Mikva expressed confidence that there are not enough votes in the legislature to override a Walker veto.

"So I think the mayor ought to just swallow his spleen — or whatever you do with your spleen — and give up on it," Mikva said.

Mikva has described the proposed boundaries of his district — which would take away half of Evanston and all of Niles Township and add portions of Leyden and Proviso townships — as a "vendetta" for his refusal to endorse Daley for reelection.

Other observers believe the reasons behind the map are Daley's desire to create a new congressional district for Chicago Ald. Roman Pucinski, and to extend some all-Chicago districts into suburban areas to give Daley more control over election of delegates to the 1976 convention.

Golfers, beware of the protective nesting redwinged blackbird...

Birdie scores a golfer who swoops down...

Golfers, watch out at the seventh tee at the Mount Prospect Golf Course — particularly if you're bald.

There's a rather protective redwinged blackbird that is divebombing anyone who disturbs its nest. Apparently it doesn't give much warning, but swoops down from a nearby tree to attack anyone who poses a potential threat.

The problem isn't a new one, said Park Director Thomas W. Cooper, who added that in past years golfers at other spots on the course also have been attacked by birds during the nesting season.

"Every couple of years you hear about this thing," Cooper said. "But in the past it's been a Kingbird that has done all the dive bombing."

One woman living across the street from the seventh tee said the bird is more likely to attack bald men, but a person with hair isn't immune. "I have watched more golfers walk away rubbing their heads," she said, noting that the bird usually doesn't bother people with hats.

Cooper said he didn't know what the bird's preferences are. "It hasn't bothered me," he said.

Protest planned on school demotions

Several Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 parents plan to protest the possible demotion of two administrators to teaching positions at the June 16 board meeting.

Supt. Roger Bardwell has recommended the board demote Erwin Stevenson, assistant superintendent for instruction, and Charles Bassford, director for curriculum review, to teaching positions next year. The board plans to act on his recommendation at the June 16 meeting. Board Pres. Judith Zanca said the board was aware that Bardwell would make this recommendation and supports him.

ALAN STEWART, secretary of the School Community Council, said "there are some people in Dist. 59 who felt that it was a rather precipitous move and who felt Stevenson might have been given more time."

He said Stevenson's position is "almost untenable now. If he does take this teaching post it will be the end of his career because if he applies for another job as assistant superintendent they will want to know why he went back to teaching."

Stewart also has worked with Stevenson as chairman of the district goals committee that just completed a study of problems and needs in the district. Through his work with Stevenson, he said, he has "not seen anything about him that warrants this kind of action. I feel Dr. Stevenson is a very conscientious sort of person. A philosophical difference is a reason for changing a man, but not on three weeks' notice."

Stevenson said Bardwell told him the reason for his possible demotion was a difference in education philosophy. Stevenson said he was notified too late in the school year to seek a position in another district and that his chances for future employment on the administrative level could be hurt if he accepts the teaching position next year.

NITA STAMM, past president of School Community Council, said she will attend the meeting to demand an answer about what will happen to the current education programs for which Stevenson is responsible.

"I am very distressed that the board is leading up to this," she said. "To ruin a man's career is a new low for this board. It is one of the least ethical things I've seen."

Lawyer's counsel needed on tax shelters

Dear Dorothy: My husband and I are thinking ahead to retirement and are seeking counsel as to whether it would pay us to buy a resort condominium now and go into part-time rental for the tax breaks until we are ready to take over on our own. I'd be interested in your contribution to our "education." — Mrs. W. G. B. Hottelet

I'm sure you've been told this is a tricky investment field, even though the central idea is sound (as is the tax shelter aspect). Surely, you've also been told how many well intentioned people have been duped one way or another by unscrupulous condominium builders operating under too loose state laws. Exposure and pressure have brought some reform, but not nearly enough. However, don't blame it all on the high pressure salesmen. It takes two to make a deal.

What you should do is check the IRS for tax shelter data on the areas in which you are interested. And for heaven's sakes, take the one best piece of advice around: seek out a responsible lawyer with proved competence in this hazardous field.

Dear Dorothy: I, too, had a mass of tiny white insects floating on the water on my African violet. A florist suggested I "overwater" them. The insects disappeared with the overflow. Each time they reappeared, I repeated the process. Finally, there are no more bugs! — F. C. Warren

Dear Dorothy: Not only long polyester dinner gowns grow longer between wearings — it happens also with Chantilly lace, chiffon, satins, taffetas and cottons. This is what I do. Hang the dress on a hanger; then hang half of the length of the skirt on another hanger lined with round cardboard. This lifts the weight of the skirt length from the shoulder seams — then twist-ems will keep the two hanger hooks together. This is a great help in storing long dresses in bags in closets and when traveling. — Mrs. George Marsh

Dear Dorothy: I've always used the grater on a lemon when I wanted to get some lemon flavor into a dish. In a hurry, I picked up my vegetable peeler and within seconds had all the lemon peel I needed — and no nasty grater to have to clean. — Phyllis Borgstrom

PENDANTS FROM PLASTER

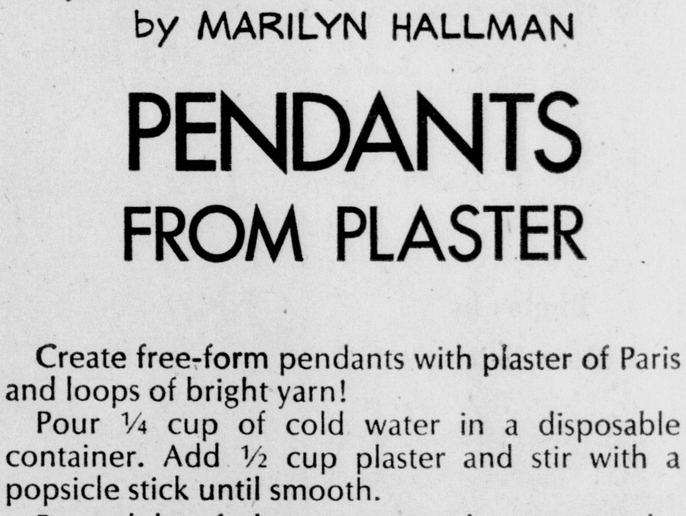
Create free-form pendants with plaster of Paris and loops of bright yarn!

Pour ¼ cup of cold water in a disposable container. Add ½ cup plaster and stir with a popsicle stick until smooth.

Pour globs of plaster on waxed paper. Let dry until partly set--about 30 minutes. With a toothpick or pencil point, make a hole near the top edge of each plaster glob. Let dry overnight.

Decorate the pendants with tempera paint or felt-tipped markers. For a shine, coat with clear nail polish when the colors are dry.

Fold a 24" piece of yarn in half. Poke the looped middle through a pendant. Bring the two loose yarn ends through the loop and tie around your neck.



Stained glass collectible for beauty alone

Last week I wrote about old houses and mentioned stained glass, which is often an architectural feature of homes from the Victorian period through the 1920s.

I recall that in the first rented home we occupied as newlyweds the two small windows on either side of the fake fireplace in our "Chicago Bungalow" (Chicago Bungalow is a real style, constructed literally thousands of times in the big city and the suburbs in the '20s and '30s) were of leaded and stained glass, in the style now known as Art Deco. I admired the windows but noticed some years later that new owners had replaced them with glass brick!

Anyhow, stained and leaded glass windows are now absolutely the "bees' knees" in decorating, especially among younger householders. Windows salvaged from churches, homes and public buildings are trotted out, frames repaired, missing panes replaced, then the windows are hung from chains or placed in existing openings to catch the outside light.

ACTUALLY, STAINED glass windows have been known for thousands of years. Around 7000 B.C. ancients in the Near East were experimenting with glasses of different colors, and the glass produced was held in the same high esteem and value as gem stones. Indeed, it was worn as jewelry.

Earliest known glass works were in Alexandria, Egypt. Here the craft of glassmaking flourished following invention of the blowpipe, which allowed craftsmen to control the shape, size and thickness of glass products. When the Romans conquered Egypt, they took Egyptian glassworkers and the glass home to Rome, where the first colored glass windows were made.

With the advent of Christianity, the status of stained glass changed from a minor to a major form of art, and as the Roman Empire declined, this art form moved to other countries: other parts of Italy, France, Germany and finally to England.

MOST WINDOWS from the early centuries depict religious scenes, for it was in churches and cathedrals that the artist-craftsmen found sponsors and funds, as gothic structures rose all over Europe, vying in ornateness. But during the Reformation, with its turning away from flamboyancy and worldliness in the church, many of the most famous and beautiful old windows were destroyed.

In this country, it was not until 1879 that Louis Comfort Tiffany, an artist director who owned his own company at age 31, began to make some of the world's most beautiful stained glass, his techniques compounded from a study of Middle Ages glass mixed with his knowledge of technology and chemical wizardry. His windows have never been surpassed, and it is possible, once you've seen a few Tiffanys, to spot them on sight.

Late Victorians took to the "new" art of stained glass windows immediately and began to embelish their homes with them. But after a couple of generations, they passed from favor and thousands were stacked in the yards of wrecking crews, in the cellars of churches, and attics of homes, too good to throw away, too old-fashioned to use.

THE GREAT Stained Glass Window Revival in our part of the country, at least, began about 20 years ago. At any rate, that's when I became aware of it, and I recall a shop in the western suburbs which specialized in windows of all shapes and sizes. People began to buy them for $5 to $10 — to place in an existing window or, very avant garde, to build into a house under construction.

I bought 10 panes of stained windows from the dealer mentioned and placed them in my living and dining room windows for a time, but tired of them and sold them for a few dollars' profit. I remember that one fell and broke apart, but I really didn't care — I had more!

My panes were without the frames, and many were sold that way, for frames were often rotted and torn apart when removed from buildings. However, frames can be restored or replaced at a carpentry shop at not too great a price.

AS FOR PRICES, now, they vary according to the work and ornateness of the window. Many simple "Art Deco" designs with only a few colored pieces in a rectilinear pattern may sell (and I saw some recently at The Antique Emporium in Prospect Heights) for as little as $40. These '30s designs appeal to the younger people, to my daughter, for instance, who says she wants to establisa a "Depression" look to her home when she marries.

Floral designs or those with "bullseyes," round, thickened blobs of hand-blown glass rather like the bottoms of bottles, command higher prices. So do signed ones, of course, no matter who the signer, but Tiffany heads the list.

I do feel such windows are good investments. I doubt the stained glass craze will end for a long time, for there is really nothing more beautiful on a bright sunny day when the windows dance with refracted light, or even on a cloudy day, when they glow as if lit by candlelight.

Religion today

by Rev. Lester Kinsolving

Jesus had a sex life?

Are we on the threshold of another Great Religious Revival?

Well, one of Hollywood's most outstanding religious group leaders, Miss Jane Russell, who electrified the post-World War II religious boom by announcing that "God is a living doll," — has once more spoken out.

Miss Russell, Howard Hughes' great box office mammal, has now stated, according to Esquire magazine, that she would like to sit in Jesus' lap and tweak his nose.

Not to be outdone, Danish film producer Jens Joergen Thorsen has disclosed that his forthcoming epic, "The Loves of Jesus Christ," will feature a great deal more public intimacy than mere lap-sitting nose-tweakers.

Taste has not altogether perished, however. For the government of France has refused to allow this atrocity to be filmed on French soil. And a national poll of Denmark (whose citizens are no more blue-nosed in reputation than the French) reveals that two-thirds of Thorsen's fellow citizens disapprove of this obscene blasphemy.

Alleging that Jesus had a secret love life is rather old stuff, however outrageous it is to the sensibilities of millions of his devout followers.

D. H. Lawrence plumbed the depths of this divine lust motif with his detailed titillation in a myth about Jesus' seduction by a temple prostitute. Nikos Kazantzakis also found this theme profitable in his priapistic "Last Temptation of Christ," described by University of Southern California philosophy professor Geddes MacGregor as:

"Seeing Jesus constantly on the edge of fornication, but heroically resisting it."

The Rev. Dr. MacGregor, who is also Canon Theologian of St. Paul's Cathedral in Los Angeles, notes:

"If modern New Testament scholarship has shown us anything at all, it is surely that we know much less than our forefathers thought they knew about the details even of Our Lord's public life."

MacGregor zeroes in on the latest in a long and tiresome series of hot pseudo-scholarly books such as "Passover Plot or John Allegro's ludicrous contention that Jesus was really a great mushroom.

"William Phipps knows the most intimate details of the private life of Our Lord," notes MacGregor in a living church magazine review of Phipp's new book, "The Sexuality of Jesus."

And added, "Out of his unlimited store of dogmas, Phipps claims that Jesus was, of course, married."

(Of course. "Was Jesus Married?" was Phipp's last book).

"Jesus, Phipps thinks, was for sex . . . " comments MacGregor, "the champion of all who want to rid themselves of the disease of asceticism and the virus of self-sacrifice. After a while one almost wonders, indeed, whether there were not originally a ninth beatitude . . . makarioi hoi pornoi ('Blessed are the fornicators')."

Then, fully regretting that Phipps is chairman of the department of religion at a college related to the Presbyterian Church (Davis and Elkins, West Virginia), MacGregor concludes with the humorous disdain that such books deserve:

"Goodbye, Mr. Phipps."

'Let's pretend I'm a city employe and you're an alderman. Hand me my free phone...'

Herald opinion

An idea whose time has gone

Other communities in the Northwest suburbs don't know it, but the elected officials in Des Plaines may have hit on something that could spread like wildfire. It's a novel approach to the old game of taking the taxpayers for a ride, or in this case taking them for phone bills and parking places.

It has come to light that since 1949 the City of Des Plaines has been absorbing the telephone bills of elected officials and some cityemployes. And the city topped that idea recently by passing out window stickers to employes so their cars can park free in city lots.

It's not a big thing, this kind of government porkbarrelling, but even so it is interesting that those Des Plaines aldermen who so easily put fees on everyone else take their phone bills off themselves.

This year it will cost the city some $22,000 to give away telephone service to 200 employes and the aldermen. And aside from a few key employes, we can't for the life of us imagine why free telphone service is necessary for the majority of those 200 homes.

The free parking is an irritant but makes a little more sense. The city's lot for employes is temporarily inadequate and free use of metered lots is a courtesy to those employes who work in the city hall. But we hope the situation is indeed temporary because as in the case of the free telephones, it is too easy for government to pass on to selected friends the largess of the full inventory of city powers.

In fact, now that we think of it, maybe the idea hasn't gone far enough in Des Plaines. If you give an alderman a free telphone why not give him free water, too? Or how about having the public works guys come by and mow the lawns of the aldermen? If a person is an alderman h e doesn't have time for things like mowing a lawn.

If you can give out free parking spaces, why not freedom from building fees? Or how about eliminating garbage pickup charges for those special members of city government?

Now if only the aldermen could figure out a way to get a discount on their tax bills . . .

In Cook County Circuit courts, judges adhere to a 'I'm OK, You're OK' rule

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
A news analysis

Circuit Court judges have written what could be another chapter — called judicial retention — for the popular book "I'm OK, You're OK."

After much to-do from the bar associations and court reformers about unqualified associate court judges, the full circuit court judges did nothing about removing weak judges from office during a recent retention vote.

One-hundred twenty-two associate judges sought retention for four-year terms. One-hundred twenty-two associate judges received passing grades in the balloting.

The vote ignored the recommendations of the Northwest Suburban Bar Assn., the Chicago Bar Assn. and the Chicago Council of Lawyers which found various judges unqualified. The balloting ignored an investigation of one associate judge by the Illiois Judicial Inquiry Board. The vote also ignored common sense and was, as CBA President John B. Connelly said, "incredible."

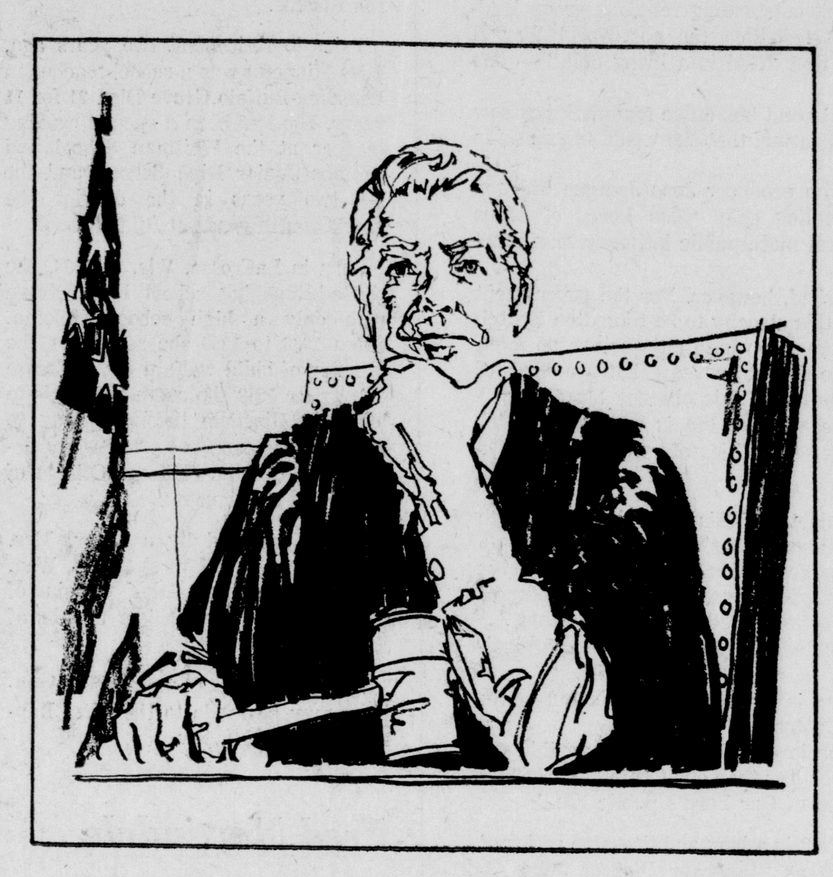
When coupled with the November 1974 judicial election results, where all full Circuit Court judges seeking retention won approval from the electorate, the recent retention results ring of I'm OK, You're OKism.

Reform is an old word in Illinois politics. The Illinois Judicial Reform Act of 1964 was designed to guarantee a competent judiciary. Eleven years later, the problem of removing unqualified judges remains.

Full Circuit Court judges are retained via a long, meaningless ballot that few voters find of interest. The power to retain associate judges then rests completely in the hands of fellow full circuit court judges.

The most common reform cry, which was raised during the state's 1970 Constitutional Convention, is for "merit selection" of judges.

But, even the vaunted Missouri plan, where a screening panel submits names of qualified candidates to the governor for appointment, relies on nonpartisan election for retention.



Twenty states have adopted the Missouri plan. In Delaware, New Hampshire, Indiana (for lower court judges), Hawaii, and New Jersey, judges are reappointed by the governor. In Massachusetts, judges are appointed for life.

Any system of judicial appointment will fall short of perfection. A trial period on the bench can be more revealing than careful screening and can identify flaws that demand removal from the judiciary.

In Cook County, the full circuit court judges ignored the trial period of the associate judges. The lawyers groups, with members who practice in the associate judges' courtrooms, found some of the judges unqualified but the Circuit Court judges were deaf to the complaints.

The present retention system is flawed and useless because nothing can force Circuit Court judges to remove a less-than-qualified associate judge. The system was adopted with the idea that the judges would seek high standards and would identify and eliminate judges who did not meet the standards.

The Circuit Court judges responded to the system by exerting no effort to find unqualified associate judges. Instead of looking at the over-all recommendations of the lawyers groups, the judges asked for hard-to-supply specifics about supposedly qualified associate judges and arranged a charade meeting where questionable associate judges were allowed three minutes to rebut bar association complaints.

Various judges have suggested different reasons for the refusal of the Circuit Court judges to find any associate judge unqualified. The circuit court judges were apparently miffed at Chicago Bar Assn. representatives who walked out of a meeting when asked to detail shortcomings of the associate judges. Some judges complained that the bar group retention recommendations lacked "facts." Other judges said that "lobbying" by associate judges for favorable votes and the cutoff that set 40 per cent as a retention failure level make meaningful decisions impossible.

John Schmidt, president of the liberal Chicago Council of Lawyers, has called on the Illinois Supreme Court to order changes in the retention system. Schmidt said after the retention vote that the council may petition the Supreme Court for merit selection and review.

The Chicago Bar Assn. said it will study the retention system before recommending changes.

Perhaps the first change should be removal of complete associate judges retention power from the Circuit Court judges. Total retention control by the bar groups, however, is not the answer.

A compromise which would establish review by an "expert" panel — possibly composed of judges, attorneys and other interested persons — would move toward a guarantee of a proficient judiciary.

Until the system is changed, indifference may be the rule and Cook County appointments to the bench will, in effect, be for life.

Well, buckle my frozen turkey!

A few weeks ago I bragged about how everything had gone right all week, knowing as I bragged that it was a sure way to have the roof fall in on me.

But it didn't happen.

In fact, the best thing of all happened the very next week.

The seat belt warning buzzer on my car wore out.

So that I don't get bombarded with complaints from seatbelt lovers I will hasten to add that I always use mine. However, I resent the nag telling me that I can't put a few packages or a six-pack on the passenger seat and I do not plan to have that buzzer repaired. Ever.

I don't know what its life expectancy was but I no doubt shortened it considerably during the first months of my car ownership which coincided with my first months of owning a driver's license.

First, there was the 20-pound frozen turkey I bought for Thanksgiving. I put it on the passenger seat, backed out of the parking space and as soon as I shifted into drive, the buzzer went off.

Being such a new driver there was no way that I could aim the car and at the same time truss up a turkey. Furthermore I was then still sensitive to getting honked at and I didn't want to stop and hold up traffic while I belted the bird. So I drove all the way home with the buzzer buzzing.

A few weeks later I bought a case of holiday cheer and put that on the passenger seat. Again the buzzer went off but that time I was lucky enough to get a red light a couple of blocks away, and I quick buckled up the beer. Of course, I had to undo my own belt so I could reach far enough to do this.

Then the light turned green, the car behind me honked and I said, "Yes sir, sorrysir, I'm on my way sir," and drove off. The buzzer reminded me that I was now unbuckled, I said, "To hell with you sir," and again drove all the way home with the buzzer buzzing.

Relating my frustrations to No. 1 son I was told, "Beloved mother you meathead, why don't you buckle the belt before you put anything on the seat?"

"I didn't think that was legal," I said.

So maybe it's legal, but it didn't completely satisfy my breed of buzzer. Whether my passenger was a big-busted turkey or a flat-chested case of beer, it still stuttered in protest when the seat belt was hitched only to itself.

This morning I discovered something else about the old nag. I kind of miss it.

Fence Post: letters to the editor

'We care where our kids play ball'

I have just come home from watching a practice baseball game senior league from Hoffman Estates against another senior league of Hoffman Estates. The boys had not even been practicing an hour when the "big guys" softball league came and told them they had to get off the field as they were in the way. Both Hoffman coaches had permission from their supervisor to use this field, which is at Hoffman Estates High School.

Mind you, they did not want to use the field, the boys were just in their way. This field by the way, is used to practice on a first come first serve basis.

One of the smart guys then proceeded to call a member of the Hoffman Estates baseball board who came and said the boys had to leave the field. Why? Because now comes the clinches. We pay to have our boys play baseball, but the softball league playing was not from Hoffman.

We irate parents checked the players cars as they were getting out of them and at least 75 per cent of them were not from Hoffman Estates. We counted Mount Prospect, Glendale Heights, Rochelle, Deerfield, Streamwood, Hanover Park, Rolling Meadows, etc.

We, as taxpayers, and heavy taxpayers at that, should have first rights to our own fields.

Maybe some parents are apathetic and don't care where their kids are or what they are doing, but there are more of us who do care and feel we should have the right to use what we are paying taxes for.

If the kids go to Cottonwood Park in Hoffman to play, the soccer teams chase them away, Chino Park has dirt mounds in the infield and now we get chased out of Hoffman High field. The season started May 31. Perhaps we should hold the games in the streets, but then someone would complain we stepped on their grass.

Yes, Mr. Rush, park president, we do care and we are enraged. Enraged that there is no place to practice and now bad field to play on. Strange, isn't it, that football players have no problems getting fields.

Is there some law that says these softball players from other communities have rights over the people who pay taxes for these fields? If there is, I don't know about it. Someone had better enlighten us parents.

Thank you for letting me blow off steam for myself and many disappointed boys and to all you softball leagues, may your season be as miserable as you have made these boys feel.

Niles West rules state

Senior Ray Borucki, who pitched a no-hitter in the afternoon semi-finals, cracked out two hits and mopped up with hitless relief pitching Friday night to lead Niles West to a 7-4 victory over Joliet Central in the finals of the Illinois high school baseball tournament in Peoria.

Borucki, who was voted the tournament's most valuable player, went 2-for-4 with a single and a tournament record-tying third triple. He also came in from second base to pitch the last 1 2/3 innings, striking out two and extending his hitless streak to 10 2/3 innings for the tournament.

In the afternoon, Borucki tossed a no-hitter while Niles West rolled to a 13-0 victory over Springfield. Joliet Central edged Decatur MacArthur 3-2 in the other semifinal game behind a two-run single by Mike Lavazza.

It was the second title for Niles West, which won it all in 1972 and finished runnerup in 1964. Niles finished its season with a 23-3 record while Joliet Central finished 34-4.

Third leg of Triple Crown today

Foolish Pleasure and Master Derby get one more chance today to assert their superiority over this year's crop of 3-year-old colts in the 107th running of the Belmont Stakes.

However, there are four other colts in the nine-horse field whose records are only a shade less impressive than Kentucky Derby winner Foolish Pleasure and Preakness victor Master Derby.

Thus, it will be no easy task for either Foolish Pleasure or Master Derby to come out of the $193,600 Belmont as the undisputed champion 3-year-old colt.

Foolish Pleasure with his Kentucky Derby victory and 11 wins in 13 races, is the early line favorite at 2-1 and a triumphant Belmont may finally earn him the title of champion.

But, in addition to Master Derby, who beat Foolish Pleasure by a length, Avatar, Diabolo, Prince Thou Art and Singh all rate serious consideration for the Belmont's $116,160 winner's share.

Cubs, White Sox both fall 5-1

The Chicago Cubs and White Sox suffered identical 5-1 setbacks Friday evening.

George Foster belted a two-run second inning home run to back the five-hit pitching of southpaw Don Gullett, helping the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-1 win over the Cubs.

Gullett's victory was his seventh of the season against three losses, and the Reds scored all the runs they needed in the second off loser Bill Bonham (5-5) when Dan Dreissen singled and Foster homered.

Gullett lost his bid for a shutout in the sixth when Andy Thornton followed singles by Jose Cardenal and Bill Madlock with a sacrifice fly.

Bobby Bonds took over the major league lead in home runs with his 13th by slamming a two-run shot in the second inning to pace the New York Yankees to a 5-1 win over the White Sox.

The Yankees sent Wilbur Wood down to his 10th loss in 12 decisions as they tagged him for eight hits and all their runs. Rudy May went the distance for the Yankees.

The White Sox' only run came on a third inning single by Jorge Orta, walk and Bob Coluccio's single.

Heights tops Northbrook; Lions drop opener in legion baseball

Three American Legion baseball teams will represent the Herald area this summer, and two already have received their first game exposure.

Arlington Heights is off to a quick 4-0 start under Coach Lloyd Meyer.

The Logan Square Lions, coached by Larry Nomellini, dropped their debut to Northshore.

Wheeling, guided by Gerry Grybash, will be idle for approximately one more week before launching its summer schedule.

Bob Schmidt became Arlington Heights' fourth undefeated pitcher when he outlasted Northbrook, 5-4, in eight innings.

Thus, Schmidt joined Paul Kastner, Tim Halas and Bob Huber who have each compiled a 1-0 record.

Mike Lapcewich and Mike Quade each scored two runs and lead off batter Chet Janda scored the other in support of Schmidt who had nine strikeouts.

Quade scored for a 1-0 first inning lead when Tom Barnard, Steve Breitbeill and Schmidt each singled.

Northbrook assumed a temporary 2-1 lead in the fourth but Lapcewich and Quade scored runs in the home fourth, each coming across on Breitbeil's single.

Schmidt set Northbrook down on strikes in the sixth, but not before they scored two runs after two outs with a single and two walks hurting Arlington Heights. That made ir 4-3 for Northbrook.

But Janda scored in the home sixth when Arlington didn't get a hit, tying the contest.

Each club got a runner to second base in the seventh but no further. Breitbeil's game winning single brought home Lapcewich in the eighth.

Lapcewich and Breitbeil each had two hits as Arlington totaled nine enroute to a 4-0 score.

Mendel coach accepts cage post at Viator

St. Viator High School filled the two vacant positions in its varsity basketball program Friday and, for the second time, tapped a coach from Mendel in Chicago.

Ron Creiger comes to St. Viator as head coach. He served in a similar capacity at Mendel, as did Steve Antrim who's leaving Viator to become head basketball and tennis coach at Lake Forest College.

Creiger, 26 years old, will be assisted by Bill Probst, formerly assistant basketball coach at St. Rita, also in Chicago.

Probst has also taught and coached for St. Joe the Worker in Wheeling and St. Raymond in Mount Prospect. He replaces Tom Coover who has been named head basketball coach at Montini High School.

Announcement of the two new coaches was made by St. Viator Athletic Director Bill Pirman.

Professional circuit beckons area angler

Rend Lake lunker wins regional contest

Just as most other big-time sports have adopted a minor league or farm club system to develop future talent, the escalating professional bass fishing circuit caters to the avid angler via a series of regional tournaments.

For the serious non-expert who craves to rub shoulders with the pros but who can't afford the $150 entry fee commanded by national meets, the regional competition offers an invitation to get one foot in the door.

Rich Magnuson of Schaumburg, a yearling in the competitive fishing game, has kept a foot in the door for two years.

Bouncing from contests in northern Illinois' Chain O'Lakes to the regional matches in the southern part of the state, Magnuson finally crossed the threshold at last week's Bass Caster's Assn. Illinois Regional Tournament at Rend Lake.

While far from the winning 23-pound, 8-ounce stringer of black bass that earned Jerry Crowell of O'Fallon, Ill. a $1058 paycheck, Magnuson outfoxed the field of 181 anglers to capture honors for the biggest bass of the two-day affair.

"I was fishing with professional Don Henkens, the leading pointman in the nation," Magnuson, a 31-year-old mechanic recreated. "Fishing was really slow because a cold front had just moved through the area and the bass refused to feed and moved into the deep water."

Having only boated a one and three-quarter pounder in the tourney's opening day Saturday, Magnuson changed tackle for Sunday's finale.

"I spent most of Saturday casting black and yellow spinnerbaits and chartreuse Mud Bugs," Magnuson said. His pro partner Denny Schwann was equally frustrated, landing only a 2½-pounder as rains and high winds dropped the water temperature on Rend Lake from 76 degrees to 73.

Sunday found most of the anglers worming the hedgerows, riprap and stickups around the 19,000-acre lake. Magnuson selected a black Mr. Twister, hooked it Texas-style to make it virtually weedless and began jigging the bottom with a slow retrieve.

To disprove any lingering theory that fish don't hit at mid-day, it was precisely at noon when Magnuson felt the vicious strike of a five-pounder challenge the stress points of his gear.

Most fishermen use 17-pound test line," Magnuson said. "It sounds pretty heavy, but dragging the big ones out of heavy brush requires a lot of strength and you just can't afford to lose them."

Another piece of equipment that is frequently shunned by bass anglers is a landing net. Magnuson had one aboard Sunday, though.

"I told Henkens that I had a fish and he watched me until it was about 10 yards from the boat. I got him up to the surface and he rolled on top. When Henkens saw him, he went for the net.

"I finally got him boatside and as my partner kept reminding me to keep a tight line, the fish did a tail-walk trying to shake that Mr. Twister. Henkens finally netted him and made me even more nervous by proclaiming that it was probably the big bass of the tournament."

Magnuson sweated out the rest of the afternoon looking at his 20-inch lunker with only a brief interruption coming when he landed a two-pounder.

At weigh-in time, the only close competition was a four-pound bass. Magnuson received a handsome trophy, $100 in cash and an American Cup life preserver.

But more than the seemingly-token, material awards, Rich Magnuson had the satisfaction of fishing with, and beating some of the finest bass anglers in the country.

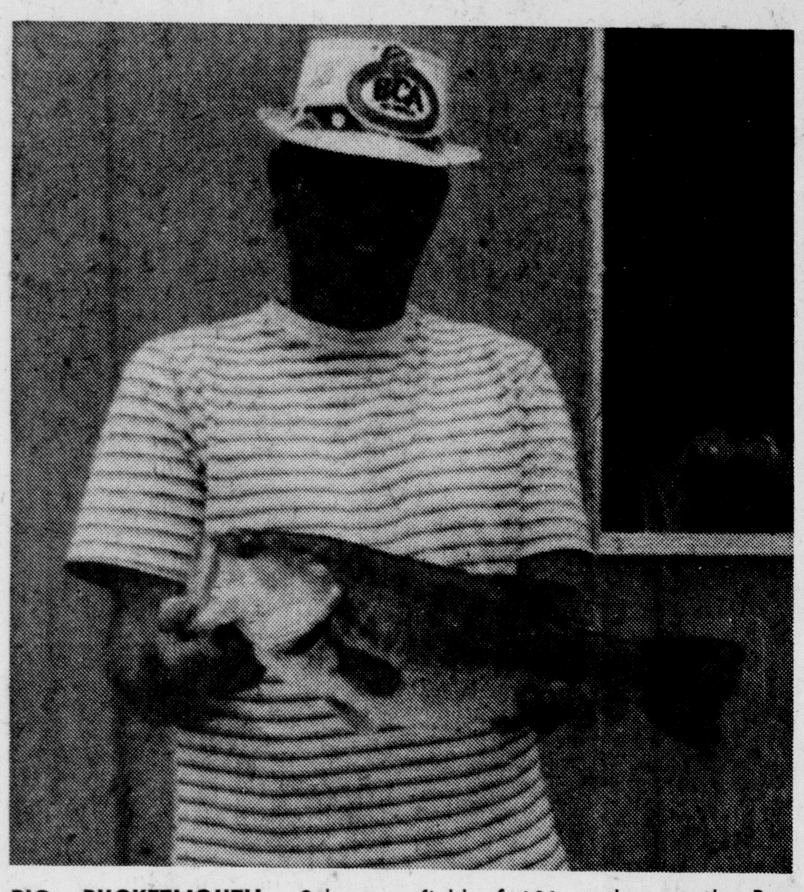
"I think it strengthened my desire to fish in more tournaments," Magnuson said. "It's contagious and something like this really gives your confidence a boost.

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm still learning. It's fun to watch the guys who really know what they're doing, but I suppose that sometime in the distant future, I may think of entering some of the national tournaments.

"It's awfully tough to fish these tournaments on a regular basis, though," he continued. "It's hard to get away for a whole weekend, especially out of town.

"The regional meet entry fee is $30, but you have to add room, board and travel as other expenses. I'd hate to make a living out of tournament fishing."

Some of Illinois' big bass are probably happy with Rich Magnuson's present attitude.



BIG BUCKETMOUTH. Schaumburg's Rich Magnuson displays the five-pound bass that topped a field of 181 anglers at the Bass Caster's Assn. Illinois Regional Tournament at Rend Lake.

Bluegrass bass flourish in upstart Barkley Lake

by VIC WATIA

"I think we've got a good lake here," the oldtimer at the gas station said as he filled the gas tank of my pickup truck. "In fact, in a few years, we think that the fishing will be much better than it is at Kentucky Lake."

He wouldn't get any argument from me. Though it was my first trip to Baekley Lake, it wasn't going to be my last.

I often have fished Kentucky Lake, which connects with Barkley, but after nearly a week of stalkinglargemouth bass on Barkley Lake, I was convinced it holds fishing future.

Bass fishemean are quick to judge a lake according to its fish population and variety of structure. Barkley is top rate on both counts.

The lake has numerous coves with buck brush, feeder creek channels and easy-to-find prominent deep-water structure such as old road beds, fast-sloping points and dropoffs near sandbars.

But more important, it also has a promising bass population.

"Look at that activity!" Tony DiCola of Hometown, Ill., remarked early one morning as we pulled into the back of a cove with a feeder creek channel.

The cove was alive with bass chasing shad.

Three casts later, the first largemouth bass of the day smacked the Rogers' Big Jim lure I was using. The two-and-a-half pounder tore line off my reel, but a short while later I had him to the boat.

This is the type of action that a bass fisherman can find provided he puts his knowledge of largemouth bass to work.

For example, while working one likely stretch of shoreline in another cove with a plastic worm we had eight pickups in about 15 minutes. Of course, we didn't boat all the fish.

But it isn't just bass fishing that draws fishermen to Barkley Lake. In fact, more fishermen probably are drawn by the abundant number of catfish, bluegill bream, crappies, stripped bass and sauger. It's not uncommon to see fishermen hefting stringers with a mixture of fish.

The visitor to Barkley Lake should be warned to make reservations for accommodations far in advance, as rooms are limited and the distance between resorts often is several miles through rolling, tree-lined Kentucky hills. Also, there are few restaurants.

However, many cabins have cooking facilities, and there are numerous campgrounds for visitors.

On Barkley Lake, a 118-mile reservoir that extends into Tennessee, the fisherman need not worry about finding plenty of room to pursue his hobby.

Barkley Lake was impounded in 1965 to develop the water resources of the Cumberland River and to control flooding in the Ohio River Basin. It covers 93,430 acres.

It is the twin of Kentucky Lake, to which it is connected by a simple channel with no lock.

While Kentucky Lake offers a larger fish as far as largemouth bass are concerned, Barkley is easier to fish, since the structure of the lake is more obvious, making it easier to find fish.

Soaring economy fails to stifle hunter spending

Despite the double drawbacks of soaring prices and high unemployment, a record 16.4 million Americans spent $143 million on state hunting licenses last year, according to figures released by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

This is an increase of almost one million hunters and some $19 million over 1973, when 15.5 million hunting licenses were purchased for $124 million. The revenues derived from these license sales form the bulk of the monies used by the states to conduct their wildlife conservation and management programs.

Pennsylvania led all states last year in sales of hunting licenses with 1.7 million licenses, tags, permits and stamps sold. California, Michigan, New York, Texas and Virginia ranked just below, each selling over the million mark. Montana had the distinction of being the most frequently visited state by out-of-state hunters, with Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Colorado running a close second.

Lost fish

Novices must learn proper drag adjustments

Vic Watia

The more experienced an angler becomes, the fewer fish he usually loses by breaking his fishing line.

Much of the credit goes to modern fishing tackle — more specifically, improved lines, rods and the drag systems on reels — and learning how to use it properly.

Reel experts claim that although adjustable drags have become a standard item on most fishing reels, many anglers abuse them. They also say improper use of drags is one of the most common mistakes in losing trophy fish.

Provided the drag system is working right, an angler who uses it properly will seldom lose his line on fish unless the fish wraps around an underwater obstacle or somehow manages to cut the line.

Drag systems allow the angler to set the amount of pressure it takes a fish to pull line from the spool of the reel. Properly set, the drag prevents the fish from escaping and tires it out, allowing the angler to land the fish.

Of course, line that is badly frayed can break easily. Poor knots, worn rod guides or matching too heavy a rod with too light a line also can be factors leading to broken line. Ultralight lines generally should be matched with flimsy rods because the soft rods take up some of the shock of fighting the fish and pressure off the line.

Mechanical drags have been around about 75 years, and experts recommend that the drag be set no more than one-quarter of the line test. If additional pressure is needed, experts say it should be applied by the fisherman's hands or fingers.

Largemouth bass fishermen probably are the biggest violators of the drag system, often ignoring it altogether. But there's a reason why they sometimes crank down drags as tightly as possible.

Largemouth bass often can be found in thick weed patches, log jams, brush piles and other hair-raising cover. Given a few inches of slack, old Mr. Bucketmouth will quickly wrap the angler's line around the roots of a tree, or some other obstacle, and escape.

In fishing such cover, anglers often use heavier line and keep a tight drag to horse bass into the open where they stand a fighting chance.

Recognizing the nature of bass fishermen, some reel manufacturers have developed reels without drags especially for those fishing conditions, or reels which disengage the drag when the angler is reeling.

What many anglers don't take into consideration when setting the drag on reels is that on some systems it takes twice as much effort to get the drag working as it does to keep the drag working.

The drag must be set light enough to overcome the initial shock of the striking fish or a sudden run by the fish. However, it must be set tight enough so the angler can set the hook.

Also, many novice anglers do not realize that the drag tension on some reels increases automatically according to how much line is left on the spool.

For instance, if a large fish peels off half a spool of line, at that point it may take twice the amount of pressure to remove line from the reel compared with the pressure it took when the reel spool was full. Another common mistake made is mismatching line with reels.

Heavy duty spinning reels, for example, should not be used with ultralight lines because the line may not be able to withstand the initial pressure it takes to engage the reel's drag system. Ultralight reels have drag systems specially designed to handle lightweight line.

A new reel always should be tested to be certain it releases line smoothly. If the drag system feels rough or jerky, it is best to avoid the reel.

Overcrowding plagues campsites

Outdoor Editor

The recent rain this week is keeping campgrounds soft at White Pines Forest State Park in the northern end of Illinois. Restoration and renovation of the lodge has begun, forcing the closing of parts of the lodge and some of the cabins.

The long-awaited concession building at Morrison-Rockwood, meanwhile, is underway as well as the new 70-site campground. Otherwise, camping conditions in this state park are rated excellent in the northern sector.

Camping areas are open at Starved Rock with the grass areas now mowed and the toilet facilities back in working order.

The biggest problem, thus far, has been overcrowding. More than 34,000 persons dropped anchor along the Kankakee River during the May 17-18 weekend on just 1,000 developed acres of land!

The mass of people prompted a ranger to comment, "They coulda stayed home and had more space!" The same held true at Starved Rock and White Pines.

Each of the three parks had to be closed to the public early each day because of the mass migration.

Traffic jams and accidents in and around the parks were common, camping and picnic areas were jampacked, tempers flared, vandalism was heavy, many patrons were unable to utilize facilities and limited numbers of park personnel at each site found control of the situation difficult to maintain.

"In short," one ranger said, "what were intended to be pleasant outdoor experiences turned into frustrating disappointing hassles. The conditions at my park are like a zoo with people starting charcoal fires all over the woods and cabin areas and three motorcycle clubs driving through picnic areas and everyplace else they weren't supposed to be."

Somewhat similar conditions prevailed at Illinois State Beach, Mississippi Palisades and Chain O'Lakes. Park rangers insist that the best way to avoid having your family outing spoiled by overcrowding is to call ahead to the site you propose to visit and select an alternate park if the conditions warrant such a move. It's better than facing disappointing circumstances.

Every park site has a limit to the number of people and vehicles it can accommodate.

Some of the alternates suggested by the park officials are Illini, Buffalo Rock, Matthiessen, Gebhard Woods, Apple River Canyon, Lake Le-Aqua-Na, Castle Rock, Lowden, Delabar and Morrison-Rockwood are suitable sites if White Pines, Rock Cut and Palisades are full.

In other areas, Putney's Landing is drying out after the last high water, but Henderson Access Area at Dam 18 is still closed due to excessive high water.

Weigh fish without scale

To estimate the weight of your catch without a scale, measure the fish's length and girth in inches (if you don't have a ruler, a dollar bill measures 6-1/8 inches.) Multiply the length times the girth and then again by the girth. Divide the answer by 800 and you'll get the approximate weight in pounds.

Constructing your own worm ranch

Early June is the time to stock up on the universal bait that everyone knows will catch fish . . . worms.

As summer progresses, the ground dries and common earthworms go deeper in the soil to find the moisture they must have for survival. Digging worms becomes more difficult, and the supply seems to disappear.

You can assure a constant supply of worms by doing your digging now, and holding them in a worm "bed" such as that used by the anglers in Mercury outboards outdoor recreation department. A home-made worm ranch costs almost nothing and is easy to build.

To frame the bed, find an old wash tub and cut out the bottom, or make a wooden box that is at least two feet square and 18 inches deep. Cover one end with fine-mesh plastic or aluminum screen.

Dig a hole beneath a shade tree, or on the shady side of a building, deep enough to hold the tub or box. Put two inches of large gravel in the bottom and fill the bed with a mixture of dirt and garden peat.

The mixture will vary somewhat because of different soil textures. The idea is to make a dirt-peat mixture that is loose, easily worked between the fingers, and that won't compact in the bed.

Moisten the bed with a half-gallon of water and put the worms in about four inches below the surface. Cover the top with several inches of loose straw, hay or old leaves. This will help keep the bed cool and moist. Water frequently throughout the summer, and feed the worms a diet of cereal (oatmeal or ground corn) and a tablespoon of sugar mixed into the top few inches of soil at the rate of one-quarter pound per week.

When it's time to go fishing, push the straw cover aside, dig a few inches and there's your bait . . . ready to go.

'Cans' on decline

The National Audubon Society's Blue List, its early warning indicator of bird species apparently headed for trouble, now includes the canvasback duck.

The Blue List went on to point out "Although far from being a rare bird, this species has suffered serious decline in recent years and should be watched carefully.

Canvasbacks were protected last year in Illinois, but were a 100-point bird (limit of one per day) during the 1973 season.

Stocks off a bit, but gain 7.35 for week

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market, its attention centered on the economy rather than a decline in interest rates, closed irregularly lower in active trading Friday on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, ahead around three points at the outset, lost 2.51 points to 839.64. For the week, however, it gained 7.35 points. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.21 to 92.48. The average price of an NYSE common share decreased six cents.

Advances edged declines, 720 to 703, among the 1,843 issues crossing the tape. Advances had held a wide lead early in the session.

Volume totaled 22,230,000 shares, up from the 21,610,000 traded Thursday.

G. D. SEARLE led the Big Board actives, off 1 5/8 to 19 3/8 on 827,400 shares, including two blocks of 100,000 shares, each at 18½.

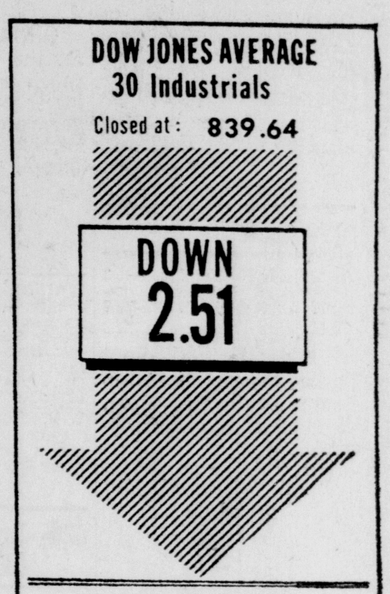
Coastal States Gas, the most active issue Thursday, was the second most active issue, off 3/8 to 10½ on 319,600 shares.

Superior Oil gained 8½, giving it a 41-point gain for the week.

Houston Natural Gas climbed 2-5/8 after reporting nine-month earnings of $2.91 a share, compared with $1.57 a year ago.

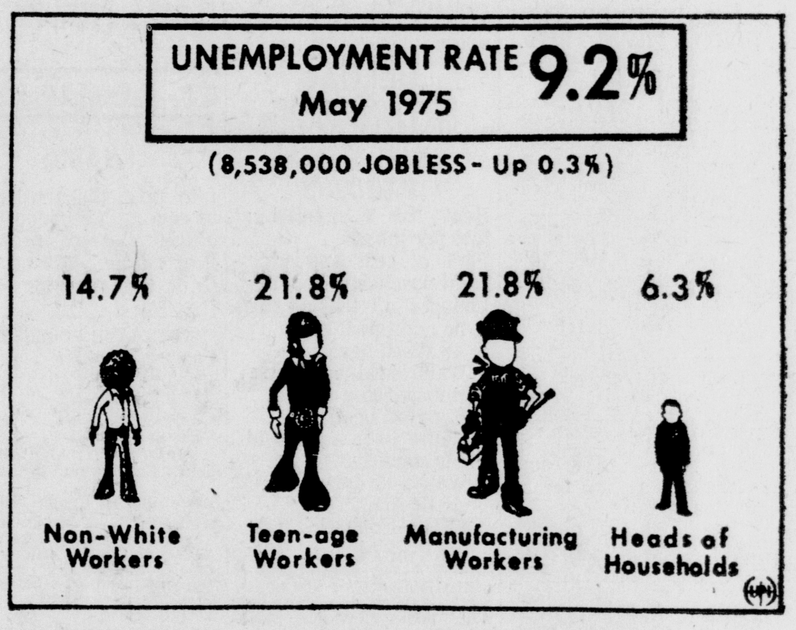
Combustion Engineering, which does considerable work for the oil and natural gas companies, gained 4½.

Airline issues dominated much of the action. Pan American World Airways was the third most active issue, off ¼ to 4-3/8 on 292,800 shares, including a block of 200,000 shares at 4¼. TWA gained 1/8 and American Airlines lost 1/8 in active trading. Higher oil prices could affect the carriers.



PRICES CLOSED mixed in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share closed unchanged. Volume totaled 3,285,000 shares, compared with 3,158,000 traded Thursday.

In the Amex options, 13,444 contracts were traded, compared with 14,343 Thursday. Gulf Oil July 20s led the actives, off 1/16 to 1-15/16 on 794 contracts. Walt Disney July 50s followed, off ½ to 4½, on 544 contracts. Philip Morris July 60s were third, off ¼ to 1 on 441 contracts.



Joblessness up 9.2% in U.S., dips in state

Unemployment in the United States hit 9.2 per cent in May, a 34-year high, while figures in Illinois for those without jobs dropped.

The U.S. Labor Dept. said more than 8.5 million persons were looking for work last month, pushing the unemployment rate above 9 per cent for the first time since 1941.

There were 362,000 persons added to the jobless roles since April when the rate was 8.9 per cent. The figures do not include an estimated 1 million who have dropped from the job maket out of frustration.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT rate in Illinois dropped to 7.7 per cent in May from a record-high 8.2 per cent in April.

An estimated 383,000 persons were out of work statewide in May compared with 416,000 in April.

In the six-county Chicago area, unemployment dropped from 8.5 per cent in April to 8 per cent in May.

A breakdown of national figures shows the unemployment among nonwhite workers at 14.7 per cent; teenage workers, 21.8 per cent; manufacturing workers, 21.8 per cent; and heads of households, 6.3 per cent.

ECONOMISTS SAY unemployment will continue to rise even though the economy shows strong signs that an upturn is under way. Employers will not be quick to rehire until they are certain of a more stable economic situation, the economists add.

Julius Shiskin, commissioner of labor statistics, told the Joint Congressional Economic Committee there are encouraging signs on the employment front. Among them, he said, is an increase for the second month in a row in the total number of persons employed, up to 84.4 million in May, 316,000 more than April.

The labor force will continue to soar this summer because of college students and graduates seeking employment and an anticipated increase in the number of persons who will again seek jobs with the economy improving.

The figures sparked criticism of President Ford from Democrats accusing him of lack of leadership. AFL-CIO President George Meany predicted in Milwaukee that the national unemployment rate would rise well above 10 per cent this year, and blasted Pres. Ford for "callous, almost inhuman disregard for the misery that goes along with unemployment."

Bozo's Circus is on the air!

...but you'll have to wait 'til 1982 for your tickets

Send in now... you'll see

by BARRY SIGALE

It is absolutely absurd, isn't it?

Tens of thousands of women send away for tickets to Bozo's Circus seven years in advance, some even BEFORE they've had any children or selected an obstetrician.

Three-hundred-thousand youngsters, hundreds not yet born, have already sewn up tickets from now to October 1982, meaning one million kids will have seen the top-ranked television show featuring Bozo the Clown, his wacky sidekick, Cooky, and ringleader Ned, who bears a slight resemblance to Elmer Fudd.

Since Sept. 11, 1961 getting in to see Bozo"s Circus live at the WGN-TV studio in Chicago has become the young world's status thing. "I'm going to see Bozo and you're not. Na-na-na-na-na!" Making reservations is as important as keeping the receipt that says the free tickets you ordered will be yours however many years hence. Safe deposit boxes are full of such acknowledgments.

TICKETS ARE a prize possession and people have been known to use all sorts of angles and gimmicks and put pressure on the station to get them. Most ploys don't work.

The Counsel General of Portugal wrote for tickets to coincide with a trip to the United States, reminiscent of Nikita Khrushchev's insistence that he visit Disneyland. The Counsel General was immediately put on a cancellation list. If someone can't use their tickets, he may.

A recent auction raised $400 when Bozo tickets were put on the block. A family vacationing in Florida was reminded its Bozo tickets were for the next day so they flew in to see the show. The day after they resumed basking in the Miami sun.

HOSTING SCHOOL children and others is only half the Bozo story. Cutting through any explanation of the popularity of the program is the human element that brings to reality a show that thrives on playfulness.

Terminally ill children make seeing the show in person one of their last requests. Deaf kids see the loving give and take between the stars and the audience. Blind youngsters hear and feel the sincerity and warmth flow from the stage to the peanut gallery and back.

Bozo's Circus is a dinosaur. It is a collosal success at a time when children's programming is going through a crisis stage. As bad children's shows are weeded out and the violence toned down, advertisers have expressed less of an interest in supporting them.

BOZO HAS survived the test of time. In its 14th season, the show boasts a television audience of some 241,000 persons (not including the viewership in five surrounding states). It is the most popular children's show the station produces and ranks third behind Mickey Mouse and Gilligan's Island in attracting viewers to Channel 9.

Broadcasting at the noon lunchtime hour the show has a ready market of children between the ages of two and eleven. The live audience numbers up to 212 daily or about 1,000 a week.

The popularity of the show is derived from many elements. It is put on live, except for four weeks during the year when new and previous shows are broadcast on tape to allow the cast some vacation time.

A three-piece band with amplifiers provides a lively sound and drums up a circus atmosphere. Juggling acts, high-wire artists and animal performers come directly from the Big Top. But the key ingredients are embodied in the three headliners, schooled from the early days of television and brought together to form a loosely-knit trio of creative and innovative personalities.

BOZO IS the central figure, a conniver who gets into trouble by ruining Ned's clothes or falling on his face. Cooky is the jokester. He hams it up from the beginning of the show to its conclusion. Ned, better known as Uncle Ned, plays straight man and handles the more important chores for the 60 minutes, one of which is getting through each segment on time.

Dressed in a scarlet coat, striped trousers and a top hat, Ned starts the show with a long toot on the whistle hanging around his neck. "Bozo's Circus is on the air,"

Amid much fanfare and to-do, Bozo and Cooky are introduced to the home audience while the studio spectators cheer wildly and wave into the cameras at their families and friends who have tuned them in. They are cued when to applaud but do so gladly. The laughter is spontaneous.

BOZO IS first, his fiery red wig attracting attention, then the bulbous red nose and finally the oversized powder blue shoes. "Don't step on my shoes," he giggles in a high-pitched voice. "My lunch is in there." Cooky isn't impressed with the footwear. "You call those ballet slippers? They look like two Volkswagens."

Cooky stands apart with his multi-checked-and-striped clown garb and an atrocious thin yellow tie that reaches to his knees. He throws out a dozen one-liners in an hour: "I call my car baby. It never goes anywhere without a rattle."

The skits and stand-up comedy are strictly vaudevillian and are refined during a daily 45-minute rehearsal. A unicycle demonstration, high-wire act (transformed to a low-wire performance because of logistics) and game situations makes the show fast-paced and fathomable for even those children with short attention spans.

BOB BELL as Bozo and Ned Locke have been with the show since its inception and Roy Brown as Cooky joined the pair six years ago. Except for a several month lapse when Bell had surgery the show has gone on as scheduled with the main characters together.

While Locke doubles in the sales office at WGN and Brown spends two days a week as Cuddly Dudley on Ray Rayner and His Friends and five days as the silent manipulator of Garfield Goose the puppet, Bell is Bozo full time, with some extra time spent on chores.

As the central figure in the show, he has carved a niche for himself that has made him a hero among children and a friend of mothers needing an hour from their kids to do the household chores.

BELL SAYS the key to his success is that he has as much fun as the audience, which is transmitted over the tube to home viewers. In person he manages to shake hands with just about every visitor and pose for pictures with them.

"I talk as a kid talks. I turn words around, like mazagine and elphalent. Kids laugh and giggle when we're putting over a trick. We're child-like."

Bell is more open and talkative when he has on his clown makeup. There is no star on the door of his dressing room nor champagne in a bucketful of ice, just a plain room where he can take a half hour to transform himself into a classy clown.

HE SAYS the show is a good-will ges-

A treasure chest for antique buffs

One of the five top-rated antique shows in the nation continues through today at Lake Forest Academy's Ferry Hall. The theme of this year's show is "Timeless Beauty and Sound Investment." More than 53 dealers from 15 states are participating.

The exhibits will include American, Continental and English furniture, silver, pewter, pottery, paper weights, glassware, old maps and prints, guns, coins, porcelain, paintings, rare books and decorative accessories.

Just to visit the exhibit halls is a treat. The interiors of Reid Hall and the modern wing of Corbin Complex provide a magnificent backdrop for the extensive display of antiques. One also may enjoy lunch in the formal gardens of Reid Hall.

Proceeds from the show will be used toward scholarship money for Lake Forest Academy students.

The college is at 1500 W. Kennedy Road (Ill. Rte. 60), Lake Forest. From the Northwest suburbs, take the Tri-State Tollway north to Rte. 60 (Townline Road at Lake Forest exit), go one-half mile east to Academy entrance. If you're coming from the north, take U.S. Rte. 41 to Rte. 60, go one mile west to the entrance.

Hours for the show are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Cocktails are being served beginning at 11:30 a.m.; lunch is from 11:30 a.m. to p.m. Prices for meals are separate from the admission fee of $3 per person.

ture by the station and that his audience "comes out smiling and satisfied and with a good taste in their mouth. We include something for everybody. There are no messages."

Bozo the Clown as Bob Bell

Bell says the show draws unique audiences, like the blind and deaf children's groups. He is deeply touched that his show is on a child's list of last requests.

Unlike Fred Rogers, an ordained minister who is star of Mr. Rogers Neighborhood on Channel 11, Bell leaves his good guy image in the studio. Make no mistake. He and his partners are nice guys off camera. But Bell doesn't flaunt it.

"I'm not a Mr. Clean," he says. "When I take this off I walk right away from it." Which leads to one of the few complaints you'll ever hear about Bozo. He doesn't make personal appearances. Locke has a traveling circus show and many children who go see it are disappointed the famous clown isn't in it. Bell says his television jobs are too demanding and it is physically impossible for him to go on the road.

ON STAGE the spontaneity turns on the crowd, though Bell denies the widespread story that a famous obscene slogan was hollered at him while the show was rolling. To this day, they get comments from people who swear they heard the epithet clearly.

The highlight of the show comes at the end when the audience files out of the studio in a giant Grand March. Men, women and children strut proudly past the cameras as if they were soldiers on review.

"We have some surprises for you to take home," says Bozo.

"Yah, chicken pox, mumps, the flu," kids Ned.

OUTSIDE, ushers hand out a can of root beer, a papaya, Bozo buttons and pictures of the clowns and Ned to each child. Walking away, they look like they've been to a birthday party with all the fancy trimmings. Bell enjoys the thought.

"One of the biggest benefits, it doesn't amount to much, is what you hear. People come up to you and say, 'boy it was worth a seven year wait.'"

Bell's philosophy is that he has been waiting that same seven years to do the show for them. When somebody asks how long it took him to get ready for the circus he has a quick reply. "Twenty-five years." It's been a career effort.

Five new Irish issues ready

A series of five new definitive stamps will be released June 17 by the Irish Post Office.

Designs include a 6p and 7p Dog, which will replace the Stag designs of those existing denominations; an 8p Stag, a 15p Winged Ox and a one-pound Eagle adhesive.

Topical collectors as well as collectors of Irish stamps might consider this issue because all the designs are inspired by early Irish Christian art. The Dog is taken from a decoration on an ancient Irish brooch in the National Museum, Dublin. The Stag design can be traced to a suspended bowl from Lullingstone, Kent, which is at the British Museum.

An illustration in the Gospel Book in Lichfield Cathedral inspired the Winged Ox design, symbol of St. Luke the Evangelist. The Eagle, symbol of St. John the Evangelist, is based on an illumination in an ancient Irish manuscript in the library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

Stamp notes
by Bernadine M. Rechner

The new issues replace four stamps in the current definitive series — the 1½p, 2½p, 3½p and 7½p adhesives. Until stocks are exhausted, these stamps — and those of the new series — will be available from the Philatelic Section, GPO, Dublin 1, Ireland.

LEO KRUSACK, a dentist, and his wife, Sue, are rebuilding this 30-foot sailboat in preparation for their scheduled three-year round the world voyage. The Krusacks, of DeKalb, figure to spend $20,000 on the boat.

They're ready to sail into the sunset—around the world

DeKALB, ILL. (UPI) — Leo Krusack, a dentist, used to go through girlfriends "like crazy" because they were all turned off by his lifelong dream. When he found one who shared his enthusiasm, he married her.

As part of the marriage contract, Krusack says, only half kidding, his wife Sue agreed to go on a three-year round the world trip in a 30-foot sailboat. The couple will begin the voyage this November — as soon as they finish rebuilding the boat.

Krusack, 29, who has been sailing for 13 years, plans to give up temporarily his dental practice for the trip, and Sue, 26, will quit her secretarial job. They figure they'll spend a total of $20,000 on the boat and equipment and take about $9,000 with them.

"This boat is costing me twice as much as I thought it would, so we may have to stop and work in Australia if we run short of money," Krusack says.

Since marrying two years ago, the Krusacks have spent weekends preparing their boat for the journey. They bought an old steel structure with plans to refinish it, but it was in such bad shape they rebuilt it almost entirely.

"This is just kind of my life dream," Krusack said. "I used to go through girlfriends like crazy when I told them about it. Sue's a real hero. She signed up."

"She was enthusiastic from the beginning or the marriage would never have taken place."

The Krusacks will begin their trip Nov. 1 to avoid the hurricane season. They'll start down the Illinois River to the Mississippi and then on to Mexico, Panama, the Galapagos Islands, and 1,000 miles southwest to Pitcairn Island.

"Then we'll probably spend the next 1½ years going through the South Pacific, then Indonesia and India and we'll probably go around the southern tip of Africa," he said.

The Krusacks do not plan to have a radio transmitter, partly because of cost and partly because such equipment easily corrodes in salt water.

"Afraid? You bet I am," Krusack says. "But I think concern is really more the word. From what I've read, there is probably far less risk in this than in driving an automobile. Most of the problems that come result from inattention."

A different way to go — recreational vehicles

by Murray J. Brown

Increasing numbers of American vacationists are discovering a different way to tour the U.S.A. these days — by recreational vehicles.

They range from luxurious motor homes complete with sundecks and bathrooms to modified pick up trucks and homemade campers.

An estimated five million recreational vehicles — or RVs as they have become known — are in use nationwide, according to manufacturer and dealer sales records. No one knows the actual total because numerous trucks, vans and buses originally built for other purposes have been converted to recreational use by inventive backyard mechanics and others.

The growing number and variety of these vehicles have added a new element to the overall motoring scene. They require RV drivers and other motorists to adjust to the situation and make allowances for wide variations in vehicle sizes and operating characteristics. Weather and road conditions also become even more important.

Here are some suggestions from The Road Information Program, a nonprofit research and information agency based in Washington, D.C.:

New RV owners should make several test runs before starting out on the first long trip. They probably will find their rig is not quite what they are accustomed to driving. Recreational vans, trailers, trucks and buses are likely to be bigger and heavier than the family car. The differences in required clearances, acceleration rates and braking distances could call for important changes in driving techniques.

RV drivers whose itinerary will take them over unfamiliar roads should check out conditions in advance with the AAA, local highway department or park service information office in the area. Unpaved, narrow back roads in parks, mountains, beaches and other undeveloped areas could present special problems for bigger and heavier vehicles.

Check beforehand on clearances and vehicle-weight limitations on country bridges to avoid having to back track or getting stuck in the middle of nowhere.

All motorists should exercise extra caution on major highways at all times because of the wide assortment of vehicles of all sizes and shapes encountered. You'll need to pay more attention than usual to other drivers and make allowances for differences in how vehicles handle under varying conditions.

TRIP noted that highway authorities and road builders are aware of the growing demands on the road system as a result of the increasing popularity of RVs and are taking steps to meet the challenge.

Interstate highways have 12-foot-wide lanes for easier passings of the bigger and heavier vehicles and many secondary roads have been widened for safer driving.

But, TRIP warned, most country roads were designed for the smaller vehicles, lower speeds and lighter traffic patterns of earlier years and many have not yet been modernized, thus posing possible hazards for the unwary motorist.

TRIP said the type of road you take could be as important to the safety, comfort and enjoyment of your vacation as the kind of vehicle you use.

(United Press International)

Accident rate is down

While the current highway death rate of 4.5 fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles is a grim statistic, it's a vast improvement over the 1930 figure. In that year, the rate was 16.5 deaths per 100 million miles.

Clint's his own stuntman in 'Eiger Sanction'

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Clint Eastwood heaved a sigh and said, "When you're hanging 3,000 feet in the air by a thin rope on the face of a mountain, you find out a lot about yourself."

Eastwood must have discovered he has the courage of a lion, or at least a mountain goat.

He did his own perilous mountain climbing for "The Eiger Sanction," risking his life every day for six weeks on the Alpine crag.

"Before starting the picture I looked at some footage of old movies about mountain climbers. The closeups were shot on sound stages with actors hanging onto plastic rocks.

"I DIDN'T WANT to do that. It wasn't a matter of macho. Who needs that. The only way to tie in the actor realistically is to shoot him in medium shots so the audience knows who he is.

"Nobody goes for the old close-up of the star, then a quick cut to a long shot of the stunt man or double doing the dangerous work.

"You play on the senses of an audience with the danger and excitement. They know the difference."

Eastwood directed the adventure thriller in which he plays a hired killer for an international spy ring.

"I looked around for a director who was also a mountain climber," he said, grinning. "There are no such people. So I decided to direct it myself.

"Doing the climbing wasn't a matter of personal challenge," Eastwood said, polishing off a sandwich he made himself in his Universal Studios office. "I wanted to get the audience up on that mountain with me.

"I TRAINED in Yosemite for a week, and then I went to the Eiger in Switzerland a week before we started shooting. That's a frightening mountain.

"We worked a lot on the 6,000 foot ice-covered vertical north face of the mountain. Physically, it was the hardest thing I've ever done. At the end of every day's shooting I was physically and emotionally wrung out from exposure and the effort of climbing."

The second day on the mountain, British climber David Knowles was killed by a falling boulder.

"I put my life on the line out there and so did some of the other actors and photographers," Eastwood said. "Danger was with us every moment. You can't let down or relax. The tension builds and builds during the day. Even though it is wet and cold you're thirsty all day long."

At one point, a rappelling rope breaks and Clint drops down the face of the mountain only to be caught up by a safety rope, swinging 3,000 feet over nothing.

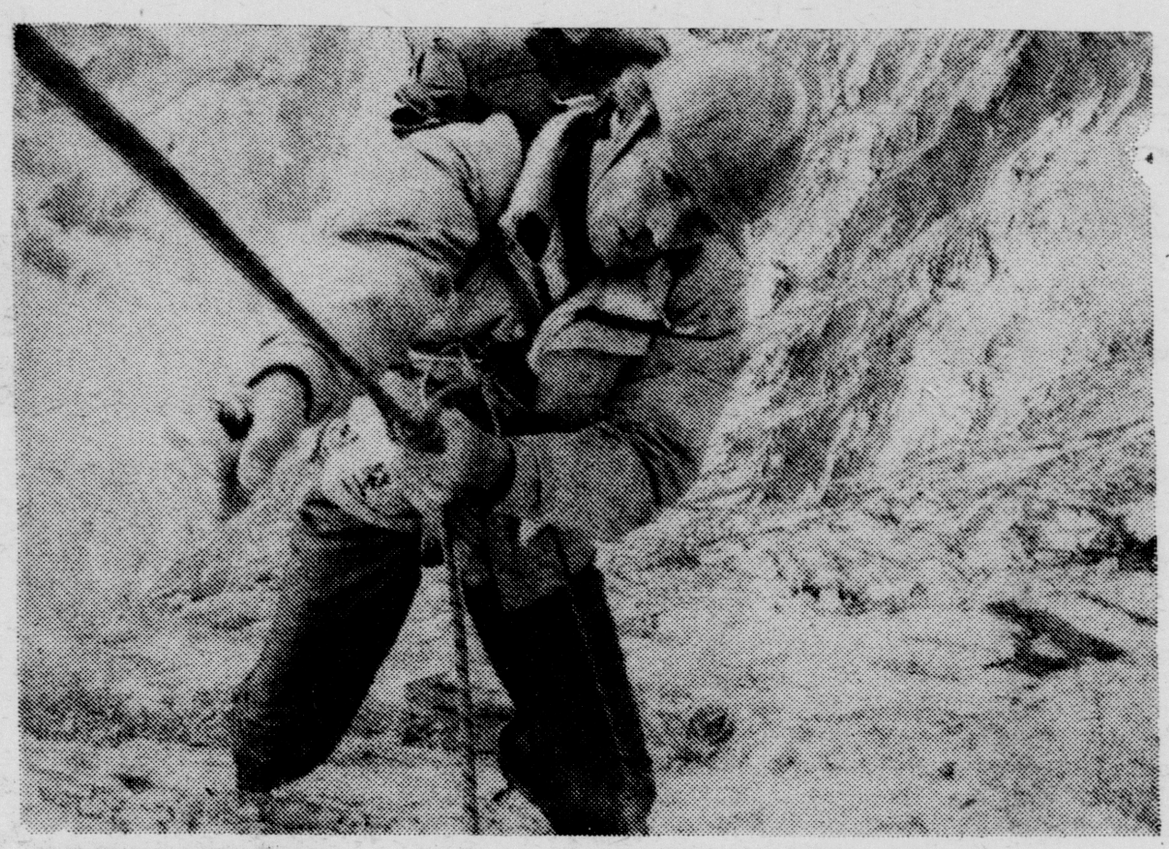
"I HAD TO CUT one of the ropes by reaching over my head with a knife. It was the hardest thing I ever had to do in a movie.

"You can't afford a single slip. There's no coming back if you get careless.

"When a man's adrenalin pours through him at that pace for hours at a time it is really torture."

At 45, Clint is a magnificent physical specimen. But he looked weary from the demands of his role as Jonathan Hemlock.

"I've never been so tired after a film. Now I'm going back to my home in Carmel, Calif. to rest, play tennis and get to know my family again.



CLINT EASTWOOD says: "When you're hanging 3,000 feet in the air by a thin rope on the face of a mountain, you find out a lot about yourself." He did his own mountain climbing in "The Eiger Sanction."

Susan's muscles ached after Babe role

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Babe Didrikson Zaharias, perhaps the greatest woman athlete of the 20th Century, will be brought to television screens next fall in a two-hour movie starring Susan Clark.

Like Babe, Susan is tall, slender and competitive. But that's as far as the comparison goes.

Until she accepted the role, Susan's athletic activities were limited to horseback riding and sailing. Babe won two gold medals and a silver medal in track and field events at the 1932 Olympics in Berlin. Later she became the best woman golfer in the land.

Clearly, this role could not have been played by, say, Barbra Streisand.

WITH OLD-fashioned hairstyles and a 1930s wardrobe, Susan captures the essence of Mildred "Babe" Didrikson. She also collected a series of sore muscles, pulled tendons and assorted contusions.

The Canadian-born actress devoted nine weeks to training for the part which required her to run the 400 meter hurdles, throw the javelin, play basketball and golf and bowl.

"Never had so much exercise in my life. And I lost 10 pounds."

Susan isn't a muscular girl. But she had no qualms about the physical requirements of the role.

"I had some doubts in the second week of production when I was running the hurdles," she said.

"I hit one with my knee and fell on the track with the hurdle on top of me. But I had to get up and keep running. The coaches told me athletes performed with pain. They said it would get to a point when it wouldn't hurt anymore if I just kept going.

"They were right. But my knee was swollen for a month."

SHE WATCHED old training films and newsreels of the Babe in competition, studying the Didrikson style and form.

"The best film was taken of the 1932 pre-Olympic tryouts in Evanston, Ill." Susan said. "Babe was phenomenal. She won seven of the nine events.

"I tried to capture her gait, which was very distinctive. I managed it by walking around in spiked track shoes."

SUSAN HAD high praise for Alex Karras, the former Detroit Lions professional football player, who portrays George Zaharias, Babe's husband, in the film.

"He's a terrific actor," Susan said. "When he played the death scene every member of the crew wept. Some of them had to leave the sound stage."

Susan became hooked on golf during the picture, despite the fact she played with ancient wooden shafted clubs of the Babe's area.

"I'm going out to buy a complete set of clubs and take up the game seriously," Susan said. "It was the most fun, and the most demanding, of all the athletic elements in the film.

"Now that I'm in top physical shape, I'm going to stay that way, and golf is the answer."

SUSAN CLARK will star in the role of female athlete Babe Didrikson Zaharias in a TV movie next fall. Alex Karras will portray Babe's husband, George Zaharias.

Restaurant of the Week

Sheraton Inn-Walden

A new addition to the menu of the Sheraton Inn-Walden dining room is a Monday night Grecian buffet complete with a belly dancer and a Greek band. On Saturday nights you can enjoy the New Orleans crab feast featuring shrimp and crab gumbo, a salad bar, shrimp in the shell boiled in beer, a whole New Orleans crab, baked yams and more. Also on Saturday night, Chateaubriand for two is highlighted along with a ftaming crepe table with seven different varieties of crepes to choose from.

Other menu highlights include a Sunday brunch, 10:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m., served with complimentary champagne, a Friday night seafood smorgasbord with over 25 items, and luncheon specials, including chef-carved sandwiches Monday through Friday.

The diversified menu and nautical atmosphere of the dining room will make your meal one you'll long remember. Red snapper, flown in fresh from Florida, Alaskan king crab with crab claws, a free salad bar and genuine Bouillabaise are only a few of the extra touches taken to insure your dining pleasure.

The Solemate lounges' special cocktail hour, from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m., features double drinks for the price of single drinks plus complimentary hors d'oeuvres.

The Sheraton Inn-Walden has newly redecorated banquet facilities for both large and small parties.

A 'new' international challenger -- Boris Spassky

There is a player who has done consistently well in international tournaments during the last three years. When he has played, he has almost always finished among the top three players. What's more, he has played at least a few games of absolutely top caliber.

Who is this fellow? Is he a possible challenger to Anatoly Karpov? The answer to the second question is maybe. And the answer to the first is Boris Spassky.

Unfortunately, Spassky is not an improving "young" player. Nor have his better performances been of super quality. Now that Karpov is champion, though, there is no longer a super star to play the role of challenger (except for the still-absent Fisher). So why not Spassky?

True, Mecking of Brazil and Ljubojevic of Yugoslavia are top-notch. Spassky could have an edge over them, if he can shake the after-effects of the Fisher catastrophe, as well as find the determination to struggle for a dubious honor, i.e., to play the youth (Karpov) who once decisively beat him.

Some hope is to be found in Spassky's most recent effort, a tie for second with Olaffson, another Soviet player (Paul Keres was first) in the very strong annual tournament in Tallin, Estonia, U.S.S.R.

His most impressive games followed the old Spassky's favorite style, i.e., queen's gambit, classic development (strong pawn center and aggressively placed pieces), and sooner or later the inevitable crush.

In Diagram 1, you see the decisive position from Spassky-Lengyel. Material is even but what an advantage in position for white! Spassky played 1. N-Q7!, and Lengyel resigned (foreseeing NxN, 2. QxP check, etc., or . . . R-B2; 2. QxP, etc.)

Another Spassky effort is to be seen in Diagram 2 (Spassky-Nei). Black's rook is under immediate attack and white's beautifully centralized position and powerful rook on the seventh rank more than compensate for his slight material disadvantage.

Nei tried . . . R-B1, but after 2. Q-N6, R-KN1; 3. N-K4, Q-K8; 4. R-KB7 (Diagram 3) black resigned. There is no answer to 5. N-B6! threatening Q-R7 mate (if 5 . . . PxN, then 8. Q-R7 mate anyway).

Good performances for Boris. But what chances would he have against the very aroused and dynamic Karpov?

North bids when East should

Today's hand should serve as a perfect example of incorrect bidding.

North started by opening one club instead of one diamond. With two five-card suits you open the higher ranking except when your two suits are spades and clubs.

East's spade overcall was sound to say the least, and South's two diamond call eminently correct. We can't find much wrong with West's jump to three spades, although some players would have gone one higher.

North's four spade cue bid was a trifle too much for his hand, but it worked to the extent that East with his tremendous hand pulled in his horns, buried his head in the sand like the ostrich and refused to make any further bids.

South's five club call was fine. In fact, we can find nothing wrong with anything South did.

If North had simply bid five diamonds he would really have come out in good shape. After West's normal opening lead of the fourth-best spade, South would make that game contract. As it was, South had to struggle unsuccessfully at six.

If East had just been thinking about what his partner might be holding he would surely have bid six spades. This contract would have wheeled in with just normal careful play.

Hula Hoop fad still twirling

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. (UPI) - The Hula Hoop, the most successful fad in the history of toy making, is still twirling from the Vietnamese refugee camps to the playgrounds of middle America.

During the 1950's, when the round plastic hoops first were introduced, between 80 million and 120 million were sold in six months.

Even its maker, Wham-O Manufacturing Co. of San Gabriel, admits it probably never will reach the popularity it had 20 years ago, but it is stili a strong seller and even has a national champion.

SHE IS DeAnn DeLuna of Los Angeles. She won her title last year during the 7th annual championships sponsored by the manufacturer and parks and recreation departments across the country.

DeAnn said, "I can keep 28 hoops perfectly controlled now. It looks like a barrel when they're all going."

The fad started in the 1950s when friends of the Arthur Melin family brought Melin a bamboo exercise ring which they had picked up on a trip to Australia. Melin is co-chairman of Wham-O.

THERE WAS even a Hula Hoop medical syndrome — adults suffered back ailments when they tried to imitate their more resilient offspring. As fast as the fad took off, it cooled. For a while, the toy disappeared from streets, yards and playgrounds. You couldn't give one away.

In 1968 Wham-O decided to reintroduce the hoop, but with the added dimension of sound which came from ball bearings inside the plastic ring.

At the time the hoop was introduced, Wham-O also put on the market another product. But because of the hoop craze, the other toy didn't make it big. It was 10 years before it became famous.

The other product is the Frisbee.
